

Abstract

A fabric softening system comprises a liquid fabric softening composition retained in liquid form within a substrate which is introduced into a rotary clothes dryer with laundered, wet clothing, wherein the softening composition is released into the fabric of the wet articles of clothing to impart softness.